WHITTINGTON CLUB and METROPOLITAN ATHENÆUM, Arundel-street, and 189, Strand.

President, CHARLES LUSHINGTON, Esq. M.P.

Reading, Newspaper, and Dining-rooms, Dining, Coffee, and Smoking-rooms, together with an extensive Circulating Library, are open from Eight until Twelve o'clock. No gratuities to waiters.

Members have also the opportunity of attending foreign language and other classes, sociables, concerts, and assemblies.

All the English, French, and German newspapers, reviews, periodicals, and magazines, are regularly taken.

So fully have the advantages offered by the Club been appreciated, that it may now be fairly said to have obtained the confidence of the public; and, thus emboldened in the efforts made for management, anticipate being able very shortly to complete the internal arrangements and decorations of the premises in a style worthy of an institution, which is now one of the features of the metropolis; while at the same time, the literary, scientific, and educational department will be rendered as complete as possible.
